The Squire's Sweetheart

BY KATHARINE TYNAN

WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED

CHAPTER VI.

A Remembered Face

The Squire was not altogether easy in his mind about Mrs. Bartlett. At first she had worked in her garden and had seemed to find a certain happiness and to be gaining health. But soon after Hilary had come down for Easter Mrs. Brown came to the Squire with concern written on her good-natured face.

"There!" she said. "I thought I'd better let you know, sir, as you were kindly interested in the poor creature. It's about Miss Bartlett. A better woman I never saw at her work. The piles and piles she 'ave mended. I'd like some lazy 'uzzies as I know to be the pore dear works. You'd think she'd be on her mind to finish a task before she'd be going. There won't be much left of her to go when she does, judging by the flesh falling from her bones as it's doing."

"What's the matter with Mrs. Bartlett?" the Squire asked, looking up from his book. "If she isn't well she ought to see a doctor. I expect it's the result of her accident. I'll see her today and persuade her to see a doctor."

He had not seen Mrs. Bartlett for some time. He had plenty of occupation, and of late a new occupation had been added, for he was sitting to Lionel Egerton for a portrait. It was a portrait that promised to take a long time, for Egerton made his money by black and white work, and took his painting as a luxury. The Squire was distressed at the leisurely manner in which the artist would spend a whole sitting painting something and then paint it out again. His conscientiousness troubled him, for he conjectured no great amount of money in the Egerton establishment. From a selfish point of view he enjoyed the sittings extremely—would have enjoyed them more if the door had opened often to let in Dolly Egerton's sleepily beautiful little face. To be sure, there were compensations. Nearly always at the end of the sitting Lionel Egerton would say, putting down his palette and brushes, "Let us go and see what Dolly is doing."

Dolly was doing some illustrations for Christmas books. She would look up with a smile as her brother and the Squire came in. Sometimes she would be sitting doing nothing, with that air of sleepiness upon her which but added to her beauty. She would come out of her languor with an effort to receive them, and her brother would rally her, calling her Dolly the dreamer. At times her expression seemed to the Squire to be very sad, and he hid impulses at times to console her for he knew not what.

He had discovered for himself, as the intimacy increased, that the beautiful Mrs. Egerton was stupid—more than that, that she was exacting and selfish as well. Her curious beauty went no further than her outward appearance. She was lazy—by way of being delicate. In the understaffed New Cottage everyone might give a hand at the work—not Mrs. Egerton. To be sure one could not associate her with mental work. Her place in life was to sit still and look beautiful.

It was a quite amazing thing for the Squire to have discovered so much. Usually where the feminine part of human nature was concerned, his critical faculties, such as they were, were in abeyance. He rather wondered at himself that he could judge the beautiful woman sitting in her moonlight blues and greens—a lovely thing to look at—so harshly. Perhaps his passionate pity for Dolly's clouded beauty had sharpened his perceptions.

He would remind himself when he had gone a certain distance in his own mind towards formulating his dislike for Mrs. Egerton, that at all events, she had not lost her husband's love; and he is a jolly sight cleverer fellow than you," he would remind himself, for he had a great desire to be just.

Lionel Egerton obviously adored his wife, and looked on her as a precious creature whom the sordid cares of life must not be permitted to approach. He accepted unreservedly the fact of her delicacy, and he had a boyish zest in taking a hand in the work of the New Cottage. The village girl who came in every day to have her labors supervised and supplemented, else the New Cottage would have been run in a very slovenly manner. He would come in cheerfully and pick up his palette, remarking that he had just been making up the kitchen fire which Phoebe had allowed to go out; he had been washing salad; Phoebe could not be trusted with the washing of vegetables; or he had been carrying coal. Once he had been sweeping a chimney and came in black as a coal. Mrs. Egerton, playing languidly with the child, without even wakening her mother's reach of her hand, had looked up and laughed.

"My dear child," she had said, "you are not fit for decent society. What will Mr. Meyrick think of you?"

There was a morning when the painter's gaiety was eclipsed. The child had had a cold in the night, and he and Dolly had been up half the night.

Granny (it was his pet name for his wife) "never knew a single thing about it till it was all over," he said. "She slept right through. Wasn't it clever of us to pull the kid round without even wakening her mother? Let's go for a walk, Meyrick. My head's like cotton wool. 'You won't be lonely, Gran, with Susan?' 'Oh, no, I shan't be lonely,' Mrs. Egerton answered, stretching her hand for the novel. Susan, after her vigils, was fast asleep in the odd little cradle bed which stood in a corner of the hall. "Don't trouble yourself, dear boy, to hurry back on my account. But don't forget that the Eclipse drawing has to go by the afternoon post."

"I had forgotten all about it," returned her husband. "My wife, an excellent business woman," he went on, "though she don't look it. She keeps me up to my p's and q's, else I'd always be painting things that nobody wants. She looks like Egeria doesn't she, Meyrick? Yet she would say that an artist oughtn't to trouble about his mission, but consider his commission. 'Eh, Gran, isn't it a trifle bit?'"

She laughed, calling him her boy, and shifting the long chain of beads that went round her neck, dropping almost to her feet. Her husband turned back to kiss her before going out with the quilt.

"I don't know how I came to get such a wife," he said, joining the Squire. "Not only is she entirely satisfying the artistic sense, but, by Jove, she is as practical as they make them. You'll see, Meyrick, I'll be a rich man one of these days. I'll have a house on Campden Hill, and a county house, and a yacht, because I can give the public just what it wants in the way of ballet girls and barmaids and perrots, and such creatures. I don't mind doing it for a while like mine, because I love to please her."

Dolly would not go for a walk. She was heavy-eyed and tired. She had just finished her morning's work at the New Cottage, and was going to bed, she said, and rest, perhaps sleep, if she could.

They left her sitting languidly by the table on which were her working materials.

"Poor Dolly," said her brother, as she started off, "she has put some of her devotion to me into her feeling for Susan. She adores the child. Cuddly enough, my wife doesn't altogether like it. Maternal jealousy, I suppose. Women are odd fish, by Jove. I'm afraid my wife thinks the child cares more for Dolly than she does for her, and so keeps them apart. We cannot understand these things, we men."

"Oh, I don't know," said the Squire. He had given up being embarrassed by Egerton's frankness. "I think I can understand it very well. 'Perhaps! The women like you, at any event. I'm not sure they'd like you the better for understanding them.'"

"I don't profess to do that," the Squire said, with a blush. "It is the last claim I should make. I always think a man who pretends to understand women is a sort of 'Peeping Tom, if he isn't an ass.'"

"I agree with you," Egerton said, going on to talk about Dolly and the fine times he and she had had in London and Paris before Granny came on the scene.

"It was a very good time," he said with a little sigh. "How we worked and how we played! We fed at restaurants in Soho or the Latin Quarter; we went to the cheapest seats in the theatres, and to all sorts of odd shows. We were never apart. By Jove, you couldn't have a prettier girl like Dolly leading the vic de Bohème in Paris without a brother at her elbow. I'm a thorough Bohemian for England; in Paris I have my prejudices of the bourgeois. I don't believe in a girl going her own way—not in Paris. It's another matter in safe, jog-trot old England."

Electricification Demand

If the railways are confronted with a need for more motive power, why not make it electric motive power? There is constantly increasing pressure in large cities for electricification. The next five years must see electricification begun in Chicago. Electric locomotives will have to be substituted for steam engines. To begin the substitution now will mean fewer steam engines on the junk pile when the change has been accomplished.—Chicago Tribune.

How to Fight Sow Thistle

Thorough Cultivation of Land and Clean Seed the Remedy

In fighting sow thistle we must recognize that this weed spreads from both seeds and roots. We must therefore prevent the plant from producing seed kill the perennial root stalk and sow absolutely clean seed grain if we are to control this terrible pest.

Various methods of attack have been advocated such as crowding out the weed by a persistent perennial smothering the plant with tar, paper, straw, manure, or by a quickly growing crop, and starving the plant by preventing it from forming green leaves. The crowding out method often fails because the thistle proves to be more persistent than the crop employed to displace it. The smothering plan succeeds on small patches, but is not practicable on large areas. Many authorities advocate the starvation that, or summerfallow as by far the best for eradicating this troublesome weed. Plough six to eight inches deep in the autumn, if possible, but if pressure of work prevents autumn ploughing, then plough the same depth about the middle of June. After a few days, begin the use of the duck-foot cultivator crosswise of the land and repeat whenever the tiniest shoots are ready to show, until the land freezes in autumn. Where the soil is loose loam the land may not need ploughing and the cultivator can be used from the start.

Never allow the thistle to show even a leaf above the ground and by autumn it will be killed. The cultivation must be thorough.

"The trouble with you, sir, is—if you will pardon me for saying so—that you think nobody good enough for your daughter."

"Yes, sir, and that is where we differ so radically. You appear to think anybody is."

The Worth of Germany's Word

Another Scrap of Paper Thrown to the Winds

The German chancellor himself communicates to the world the damning fact that having given the solemn pledge of May 4 Germany has passed the intervening months in feverish preparations to break it, to tear it up like another scrap of paper and throw it to the winds. In March the question was not ripe for decision, in May it was not ripe, and in that month the pledge was given, but now Germany is ready to enter upon a new career of assassination at sea. What has changed the situation, asks the chancellor, and answers his own question. The first, the most important effect, is that "the number of our submarines has been very considerably increased as compared with last spring, and therefore by a firm basis for success has been established." Behind the shelter of her pledge, concealing her construction work from the world save as rumor was slow and then brought some hint of it, the German government has availed itself of the opportunity of the submarine trade to prepare for a resumption of lawless warfare.—From the New York Times.

Says Horse Famine Is Coming

At least a million horses and mules have gone to Europe from the United States and are being destroyed in vast numbers. The war is not over, and they are still going over. When the war ends every country across the sea will need horses to work its farms and replenish its depleted breeding stock. With our surplus gone, American breeders asleep at the switch, and our own enormous consumption of horses for farm and city going steadily on, a horse famine is sure to ensue.—Corr. Breeders' Gazette.

Note and Comment

On another page will be seen a letter re the fixing of the trail east of town. One good scheme would be for every farmer to put on a load of gravel and drop it off as they strike these bad spots. Everyone using the East trail passes the gravel-pit, and a few minutes would suffice to take a load along.

Think it over.

Ex-Senator Depew, who says the way to keep young is to have an eye for a pretty girl and tell your wife about her, may know how to keep young, but he has no idea about how a man should entertain his wife.

A business tax of $4.00 is to be levied on all persons carrying on any trade, business or profession in the Village, who are not paying taxes on the property they occupy.

A girl may not be able to throw a stone that way, but she can throw a man over gracefully.

Grouchiness is often just the thing you need. If you are too bright and happy and have been a burden to your friends with all your cheer and gaiety you will find a few hours of grouchiness just the thing.

Few of us realize the importance of being cross and surly at the right times. It is a good idea to have at least one day in the week when we can be mean.
Make it your aim to hate everybody and sneer at all you meet. The rest of the week be happy and cheerful if you must but on one day at least be a Gloom. Pick a fight with some fellow bigger than yourself and let him poke you one on the nose. Take a few minutes each day for dismal thoughts, and, while it may mean a hard fight to overcome our exuberant cheerfulness, the culture and study of grouchiness will soon rid us of it.

Better be out of date than into debt.

Tubers we lopped off long ago.
And cakes and eggs and pies;
Glad beefsteak, too, we had to throw
And mutton chops likewise.
So there is naught we can cut out.
Plain to see the reason,
Not even beans nor sauer kraut
For the Lenten season.
—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Village Council is passing a Pound Law for restrain-ing the running at large of pigs, horses, sheep, cattle and poultry. This By-law will be in effect all the year round. All stray animals will be put in the pound that are found running loose, in the Village.

The girl who worries herself half to death over trifles, often ends up by marrying one.

Leaders.

Some leaders lead too far ahead
High-visioned, unafraid;
Yet ages after they are dead
We tread the paths they made.

Some leaders lead too far behind,
Nor seem to keep the track;
Yet they bring on the deaf and blind
Who else would hold us back.

And some seem not to lead at all,
Slow-moving on the way;
Yet help the weary feet and small
Of those who else would stray.

Lead on, O leaders of the race!
Your work is long and wide;
We need your help in every place Before, behind, beside.

I have now a full range of harness on hand.

Anyone needing Harness or Horse requisites will do well to look over my stock. There is nothing more sure than that the price of Harness will take a big jump, either this month or next, as the result of the abnormal advance in the price of leather and all raw materials needed.

Practically all the large manufacturers have to go to the tanneries to renew contracts this month, and I am told on good authority, that there will be an increase of at least 18c per lb on last contract in Sept.

It is therefore easily seen what a difference this will make on a set of harness.

I, personally, expect to see harness advance 25% this summer.

Now, you all know what my prices were last Spring; they will be practically the same this Spring as long as Stock on hand lasts.

I have a large and varied stock of

Breeching Harness,	Harness, less breeching
Carriage Harness	Hame Straps, Halters
Single Buggy Harness	Breast Straps, Hames
Democrat Harness	Brushes, Curry Combs
Collars, Martingales	Sweat Pads, Lines
Snaps and all Harness Hardware

Owing to the uncert inty of the leather situation, my terms must be rictly Cash. Please note this and do not ask for time.

Settlement Committee Has Been Appointed

Australian High Commissioner and Agent-General Walker of Winnipeg Members

The Colonial Secretary has appointed a committee to consider the settlement of ex-soldiers within the Empire. The committee includes the Australian High Commissioner and Agent-General Bruce Walker of Winnipeg. The Times hopes the committee will not be allowed to prejudice the War Conference Committee, and will also have a guard against the accusation only too readily launched that schemes of aiding the emigration of soldiers are likely to denude Britain of the best of her population. What is wanted is a central body to supervise all land settlement.

Hamilton, Ont.—"This is to state that I have received great benefit from the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Some time ago I was run down and weak, suffered from loss of appetite and was miserable. Four bottles of the 'Prescription' cured me up in fine shape; it did wonders for me and I can recommend it very highly to women who are ailing."—Miss MARY MILLER, 127 Hesse St., Hamilton, Ont.

Brantford, Ont.—"Some few years ago I got in a very much run-down condition. Was very weak; could not do anything; had no strength at all. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; I only took five bottles and it put me in splendid condition. I felt better than I had for years. Other members of my family have used this medicine and found it equally as beneficial. I can highly recommend it to weak women."—Mrs. A. GILMORE, 71 Brighton Row, Brantford, Ont.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes women happy by making them healthy. There are no more crying ailments. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Like an open book, our faces tell the tale of health or disease. Hollow cheeks and sunken eyes, listless steps, sleepless nights—tell of wasting debilitating disease some place in the body. It may be one place or another, the cause is generally traceable to a common source.

Get the "Prescription" to-day—either in liquid or tablet form—if you want to better your physical condition speedily.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Keep the body clean inside as well as outside.

For Standardization Of Canadian Eggs

Plea for Legislation to Improve the Marketing Conditions

The Canadian Produce Association at its recent convention in Montreal passed a resolution asking for the immediate enactment of legislation to provide and legalize standards for all Canadian eggs, and to provide such inspection as may be necessary to enforce such legislation, and to issue government certificates, if required, and, further, that this legislation prescribe regulations to provide against the sale of eggs unfit for food, making due allowance for reasonable deterioration.

A deputation which waited upon Hon. Mr. Burrell to urge the adoption of its course outlined pointed out that millions of dollars are now lost annually in Canada by deterioration in quality of eggs between point of production and point of consumption, and by the general lowering of prices owing to lack of uniformly high grade in the commodity marketed. Such waste, it was pointed out, should not be allowed at any time, and is doubly to be deplored at a time when enormous quantities of foodstuffs are being sent to the bottom by Germany's submarine warfare. Next to the call to produce, it was stated, follows close at its heels a similar patriotic call to conserve that which is produced.

As a further reason for the establishment of an official guarantee of such guarantees are already given by Russia and other countries, which after the war, will again compete with us in the marketing of eggs in Great Britain.

Tin Shortage in Canada

Ottawa Department Suggests That Old Tins Should be Preserved

Officials of the Department of Trade and Commerce state that there is a shortage of tinplate in Canada. This is due to lower production in England and the shipping situation. The department thinks that steps should be taken to collect all the tin available, such as tin boxes and cans, in order that it may be used over again. It is believed that if some systematic plan of collection is adopted the shortage of the tinplate will be largely made up.

FRETFUL BABIES

Mrs. John M. Weaver, Blissfield, N. B., writes:—"I can speak very highly of Baby's Own Tablets. I have used them for my children and find they are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. I would strongly recommend them to all mothers who have fretful babies. The Tablets regulate the bowels and stomach; break up colds and simple fevers; expel worms; cure vomiting and indigestion and make teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

First Locomotive Whistle

The first steam whistle was introduced in 1833, as the result of an accident. The story is told that Stephenson's locomotive "Samson," at level crossing between Bagworth and Thorton, in England, ran down a cart laden with butter and eggs and that at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Railroad Stephenson suggested that trains carry whistles blown by steam.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, great relief requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by J. C. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, it acts internally and acts through the blood in the mucous surfaces of the system. One standard bottle will cure it. It is offered for sale that Hall's Catarrh Cure fails to cure. Send for a free trial bottle.

After the War

The combination of autocracy and socialism which has worked so effectively for war purposes in Germany is evidently to be operated for commercial advantage after the war. German business is to be unified under government auspices. Every German operating in foreign fields is to be backed by the government. What chance has an American competitor against him? The only practical method of meeting such competition is to permit Americans to combine in the foreign field and employ against the outside rival the devices which were so successful which it performs. Expect real relief and permanent benefit when you buy this remedy and you will not have cause for disappointments. It gives permanent relief in many cases where other so-called remedies have utterly failed.

A Real Asthma Relief.—Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy has never been advertised by extravagant statements. Its claims are conservative indeed, when judged by the cures which it performs. Expect real relief and permanent benefit when you buy this remedy and you will not have cause for disappointments. It gives permanent relief in many cases where other so-called remedies have utterly failed.

The Most Economical of Prepared Cereals

Dear Mr. Editor:-

The road to the East of Monitor, between the elevators and the crossing by the water tank, now the thaw and wet season is here, will be a great trouble to all farmers this side if the town or some other authority does not take it in hand and get it graded or filled in with gravel etc.

It is to the interest of Monitor to make it easy for farmers to reach town and not leave this patch as a sort of trap to hold them up, as it was last year.

Gravel pit is at hand, distance is short, only wants a little energy from someone on the spot and thing is done. If Monitor is too poor to do the job, open a subscription list and I'm sure all the farmers using the trail would give a little towards getting the road fixed.

Yours truly

C. Connah.

THE CRUSHING OF HUMAN AMBITIONS WITH THE BIG ALLIED MOVEMENT

THE FINISH OF PRUSSIANISM IN EUROPE IS NEAR

Germany's Initial Failures Have Meant One Long Succession of Failures for the Central Powers, the End of Which Must Necessarily Prove Militarily Fatal

On the eve of the opening of the campaign of 1917 with its expected military decision that will make it possible to obtain and enforce durable peace, a high British military authority who has the fullest access to all sources of information on all points of the general plan of the Entente Allies, has, with the approval of the war office, prepared an important statement for publication. It is a survey of the military position in Europe based upon a knowledge of the facts and factors, many of which have not been made public hitherto. The statement says:

"Britain and her allies are looking forward with complete confidence to the opening of what they regard as the final stage of the war, the fighting season of 1917. To form an opinion it is necessary to examine the salient facts of the war."

"In launching war upon Europe the Central Powers believed that one plan, and one plan only, would lead for them the immense stake for which they were prepared to play—the mastery of Europe. That plan was the swift destruction of their enemies one at a time."

"Accordingly, the first step was to smash France; the second, to concentrate practically the whole strength of their victorious armies upon the task of delivering such a blow to Russia as would leave that power helpless and at their mercy. The entry of Britain into the war was on the whole not expected at first; but in any case this would not have modified the plan, since it was perfectly understood that Britain could not put more than 150,000 men into the field if she did decide to come to the assistance of France."

"The event proved that forecast correct, but it also proved Germany incapable of accomplishing what she thought she could accomplish despite the fact that victory rights or scruples of any kind were permitted to hamper her movements, and that in numerical strength, material resources and courage, preparedness the odds were overwhelmingly in her favor. Despite all the odds the first move of the Central Powers was defeated in 1914, and very thoroughly defeated. The second move began early in 1915, and had definitely failed by the autumn of that year."

"After reviewing in detail the strategic moves to date on the various fronts, it is remarked in the statement:

"Strategically considered, Germany's initial failures have meant one long succession of failures of the Central Powers, the end of which must necessarily prove militarily fatal to them, though that fact may well mean, in a wider sense their ultimate salvation—the Allies are fighting to secure the peace of the world—a consummation as much to be desired by the deceived and misled people of the Central Powers as by everyone else."

The statement concludes: "In the last year the Allies have been making continued progress. In everything making for success in war they are vastly richer and better equipped than they were a year ago. During the same period the Central Powers have definitely abandoned all plans of conquest, have suffered a steady deterioration of resisting power. Aware of all this, and greatly adding the means of spurring their jaded and weary peoples, they made overtures for peace. If by any odd chance these should be accepted there would be some hope of ending the just penalties of lawlessness and criminal aggression. If a flat rejection came it would bring first, a whip for their jaded people, and secondly, a sufficient means to close the mouths of any critic of further lawlessness and criminality."

"The submarine threat followed naturally and in itself presents the most naked confession yet offered of the Central Powers' recognition of failure for their jaded people. The threat would never have been made but for Germany's recognition of her inability to obtain a military victory. It would seem that Britain and her Allies have already almost got this menace sufficiently in hand. The danger has reached its climax, when the means for coping with it are being extended every hour."

"Actually, that remark fits precisely the entire outlook for 1917. The growing strength of the Allies faces the declining strength of the Central Powers. The date of the end cannot yet be fixed; its nature is inevitable. It will finally extinguish the Central Powers' menace to the peace of the world."

German-American Humorist

D. Thomas Curtin, the American who has been visiting Germany for the Northcliffe press of London on the strength of introductions, supported by Professor Hugo Munsterberg, said in New York the other day:

"Father a joke, eh, to be doing England's work with the help of Munsterberg of Harvard. 'When I saw Munsterberg last spring, he proved to me that peace treaties would be signed—peace treaties all in favor of a victorious Germany—in the early summer of 1916. But, today, I understand, he is predicting an alliance between Germany, England and the United States."

"I can't see what right anybody has to call Mark Twain the leading American humorist," he said, "now that Hugo Munsterberg has got himself naturalized."

Good Authority

A schoolmistress asked her class to explain the word "bachelor," and a very much amused little girl answered: "A bachelor is a very happy man."

"Where did you learn that?" asked the mistress.

"Father told me," the little girl replied.

Small Irrigation Projects are Successful

Result in Better Farms and Improved Living Conditions, Says Expert

Speaking before the annual convention of the Western Canada Irrigation Association at Kamloops, B. C., A. S. Dawson, chief engineer of the Department of Natural Resources of the Canadian Pacific Railway, expressed the faith that is in him in the irrigation projects for which Western Canada is becoming famous.

A. S. Dawson, B.A., Sc.

Member American Society Civil Engineers, Member Canadian Society Civil Engineers, Chief Engineer Dept. of Natural Resources, Calgary, Alta.

Although Mr. Dawson has been connected mainly with the big irrigation enterprises of the C.P.R. in Southern Alberta, he does not overlook the advantages of small projects operated by a community of farmers or even by an individual.

"I have had fifteen years' experience on what are the largest irrigation projects in Canada," said Mr. Dawson. "But I am willing to admit that the small projects such as you have in the immediate vicinity of Kamloops are quite often more interesting and worthy of fuller consideration than are the larger projects. These schemes, though small, should be considered as one of your greatest assets."

"The benefits of irrigation show their results in better farms; improved living conditions; improved social conditions and better citizenship. It conducted along proper lines it improves agriculture, saves the soil, irrigates industry, produces prosperity and should provide for posterity."

Mr. Dawson's reference to the small irrigation schemes is of particular interest to the farmers of Western Canada, where there are hundreds—literally thousands—of creeks and streams which could be used in a small way for irrigation purposes. According to the opinion of an officer of the Western Canada Irrigation Association the day is coming when irrigation in Western Canada will be limited only by the amount of water available. The increasing interest in irrigation is indicated by the fact that the annual meeting of the association in 1917 will be held in Saskatchewan for the first time. In the past it has always been held in Alberta or British Columbia, but this year the association will meet at Maple Creek, Saskatchewan.

A Sound Institution

Canadian Order of Foresters Has a Most Envious Record

The Canadian Order of Foresters have for years occupied a prominent position as one of the leading Fraternal Insurance Societies operating in Canada.

It was instituted in 1879 by 488 members who succeeded from the American Order of Foresters. Today it has a membership of over 90,000, which is the largest purely Canadian membership of any of the fraternal insurance societies doing business in the Dominion.

The society has had a most successful record and has accumulated funds, which, at the present time, amount to between five and a half and six million dollars. Last year was apparently one of the most successful years in the history of the institution. The amount added to the insurance funds for 1916 was between four and five hundred thousand dollars. Notwithstanding this success the management decided to ascertain what the actual standing of the society was and secured the services of one of the most competent actuaries on the continent. Acting on the advice of this expert, the society decided to re-adjust its rates and place itself upon a basis which will give it at least 100 per cent. actual solvency.

By taking this course, while its funds were still piling up it has been able to treat its members much more favorably than many of the societies which have re-adjusted their business during recent years.

The management is to be congratulated upon a course of action which will place the society upon a splendid financial basis, and insure the future of the order for all time.

WESTERN FRONT HAS PROVED A NIGHTMARE TO THE GERMAN ARMY

SOMME—VERDUN FRONT KNOWN AS "THE GRAVE"

Neutral Living in Germany Contributes Some Inside Information Regarding the Effect the War is Having on the German People, and the Broken Morale of the Army

A neutral who has from time to time contributed to the Times interesting articles on conditions in Germany writes to that paper from Cologne in these terms:

The exasperation produced by the duration of the war and the increasing absence of nutritious food has now produced much more original and independent thinking and talking than I have known in Germany since the beginning of the war. The easily led German middle-classes do not know what to make of the situation, and from the beginning, when they were told that Germany had been "fallen upon," their view of the war has been an entirely distorted view. But never have their leaders been so bitterly criticised as during the last few weeks. Even Hindenburg, the great god Hindenburg, has been as much abused as Bethmann-Hollweg. I have heard people here and there say good things of Count Zeppelin, but they are not many.

There is, however, one great reason, of which you are probably not yet aware, why the German people generally believe in the hope of peace—a bright hope and an increasing hope. It is not that they believe in military victory. It is not that they believe in victory in the west, where, indeed, defeat is considered to be almost certain. Nor is it the idea already mentioned that Germany has only to speak of peace for peace to come. It is the fact that the call for peace now comes not merely from the politicians, but from the soldiers.

It is an open secret that Hindenburg who has just made his second visit to the western front, returned profoundly impressed by the fact that the politicians must endeavor to make peace by hook or by crook. This is not mere gossip. I have the truth directly from a source which, as you know, has always proved accurate in my previous communications.

As I told you, the area of fighting on the Somme and before Verdun is known as "the Grave." The whole line from Alsace to Ypres is really a nightmare to the German army. Every sort of influence and "pull," governmental, social and financial, is used to prevent the return of particular regiments and particular officers to the western front, although the army headquarters has such attractions as superior supplies of food, shorter intervals in the trenches, and the amusements at Lille, Ghent, Metz and other places, which are provided in order to maintain a morale that has not been so broken for more than a century. The eastern army, although it thought that the capture of Warsaw meant peace with Russia, has been able to bear its disappointments because of its various successes since then. The western army has had no successes.

For the hiding of my identity I never talk to officers who have returned from the front if I can help it, but I am always seeing the relatives of officers and hearing what they write and say. On the west general staff general is superabundant, and the number of punishments of non-commissioned officers and men is appalling. What the losses on the western front have been nobody knows, but nobody believes the published figures. The parents of young men have just been informed that their son was taken prisoner on the Somme in July, as they had been told, but that he was killed. I am constantly hearing of similar cases. You must not in newspapers how indignation about the censorship peeps out from time to time, but the indignation is really much stronger even among officials than among the newspaper writers themselves. Nothing that they print is believed.

My latest tour has dispelled many lingering illusions about German efficiency. But I have been struck by one or two of the successful German devices in maintaining public spirit. I never could remember more music or better theatrical entertainments. As I said before, military bands are everywhere. There is no singing now when soldiers leave the front, and very few people would take the trouble to see them off were it not for the benefit. You will have noticed that the output of German books and magazines and amusing papers has, if anything, increased during the war. A recent and typical example of the German method—which has the additional advantage of making a show of German "broad-mindedness"—is the publication of an entirely new edition of Dickens.

Speaking generally, while you in England seem anxious to deprecate your people by suppressing amusements, the German government is following an opposite course. They have a difficult task before them, and the next few months will be the most critical in the history of any nation unless they are right about submarines.

The German public no longer believes all the stories that they are told about submarines—such reports, for instance, as that sailing long-distance submarines have arrived safely, but that their arrival has been kept secret by the government for excellent reasons.

While, however, it is true that the big submarines have not been the success that they were expected to be, the feverish building of submarine parties in all the manufacturing towns which I have visited is for me conclusive evidence that the government shares the general opinion, that the submarine alone can match victory out of the present abyssal gloom.

North Dakota having as its State favorably and completely and it has been virtually decided to have that class appointed as judges in the courts, at least a large proportion of them.

Instant Relief for Biliousness

and other Liver Troubles

The astonishing efficacy of Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief is due to its toning effect upon the liver and bowels. It gives strength to the organs and helps them back to health—a natural action. In other words it enables the system to cure itself. Don't weaken your liver with purgative pills or morning salts, don't get the salt-taking habit; let Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief bring you natural and therefore lasting cure.

Dr. CHAS. F. FORSHAW, D.Sc., F.R.M.S., a well-known British Scientist, writes:—"Never take Salines or Purgatives for Constipation—to force Bowel action is to aggravate the condition and create the Constipation habit. I recommend as a superior and convenient treatment Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief."

A CHRISTIAN MESSAGE

By the Rev. W. S. Wickenden B. A.

"One thing is needful." St. Luke, 10:42

Is it land? Is it money? Is it property? Is it fame? Is it high position? No, none of these things which endure only for a short time. All earthly things must pass away; even our bodies. The one thing needful is something which is not earthly and temporary, but heavenly and eternal. It is the gift of a new heart. A new heart means the realization of one's sinfulness and need, and results in seeking after Jesus. To seek Him is to find Him and to find Him is to have eternal life—the one thing needful. "Let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord." If we are truly seeking Him we may indeed rejoice for seeking Him shows we have the one thing needful. Seek Him in private and in public. Seek Him by means of His Holy Word by prayer, and by public worship. Reader, have you the one thing needful?
